

Dwight Gahm – 1999

Dwight Gahm began to play golf as a boy at Audubon Country Club in the 1930's, and half a century later, in 1983, announced plans to build a championship golf course in Kentucky. The course would become Valhalla Golf Club, which opened in the summer of 1986. His dream became reality when Valhalla hosted the PGA Championship in 1996. The event returned in 2000, and Valhalla will host the 37th Ryder Cup Matches in 2008.
